Draft Lottery Numbers Drawn

—United Press International

JUST IN CASE: Ginny Ward spins one of the drums to begin the 1973 draft lottery. Although no more men will be drafted, the Selective Service System held the lottery, which would go into effect if conscription were re-introduced. The lottery was held at the Commerce Department.

Washington (AP) — Selective Service held a standby draft lottery yesterday to assign callup numbers to the two million men born in 1954, but they won't be drafted short of a national emergency.

However, Byron V. Pepitone, nominated by Nixon as draft director, said men with Number 95 and lower will be given classifications to provide a ready pool that can be processed quickly if necessary.

He said these men will be able to receive full consideration for deferments and exemption requests.

Those with numbers above 95 will be kept in the same holding classification in which they were placed when they registered for the draft last year.

Pepitone said that if the batch of men drawing numbers this year are not needed next year they will drop into a lower category of vulnerability.

Their place, he added, would then be taken by men who are one year younger, who would also be vulnerable primarily in the year of their 20th birthday.

Pepitone also stated that though it is possible for men to be drafted after the year of their 20th birthday, it is not probable.

Pepitone noted that this is the first time since the lotteries were begun in 1969 that none of the men drawing numbers faces the certainty of induction.

The lottery numbers are as
